"To the Stockholders of The Hopkins & Allen Arms Co.: & Allen Arms Co.:

"The undersigned has been approached by members of a reputable banking house with a view to the purchase of a majority of the outstanding capital stock of the Hopkins & Allen Arms Co. The writer would only consent to enter into negotiations upon the condition that every shareholder of the company should be treated alike, and that, if offered, the proposed purchaser should take the entire capital.

proposed purchaser should take the entire capital.

As an outcome of the negotiations, the writer, for himself and associates, has agreed to deliver, on or before August 20, 1911, at least a majority of the capital stock, upon payment as of that date of fifty dollars per share in cash, and the purchaser has agreed to take and pay for at the same rate all shares up to twenty-four hundred and sixty shares which shall be offered by the shareholders and certificates encorsed in blank, deposited with the Thames National bank prior to August 20, 1911, and fifty dollars per share with interest at five per cent. per annum from August 20, 1911, on or before January 1, 1912, for all shares so deposited prior to August 20, 1911, in excess of twenty-four hundred and sixty shares.

Security for the performance of this agreement has been given by the deposit in the Thames National bank of a sum of money and of certain col-lateral agreements. If you desire to avail of this opportunity, you are invited to deposit your certificates of shares, endorsed in blank and properly witnessed, with the Thames National bank of Nor-wich, which will deliver its receipt

The writer deems it proper in this connection to state that the declared object of the purchasers, among whom are men experienced in the manufac-ture of arms, is to operate the plant to its capacity and with the hope of future enlargement. Upon no other assurance would the writer have entertained the negotiations.

Very respectfully,

ARTHUR H. BREWER.

For the past month negotiations to this end have been under way, and for the past week it has been the topic of discussion on the street and at the factory. The rumor has been steadily spreading that the control was being secured by the Winchester Repeating Arms company of New Haven, but this is denied by President Brewer, and also by one of the new purchasers.
